Handle with Care Notifications serve to inform the school when law enforcement encounters a child during a call involving a traumatic event. This can be domestic violence, arrest of a parent, a death notification, crash, etc. The school then receives a notification before the start of school the next day with the school's name, student's name, student's age or grade, and the law enforcement agency and the officer's badge number. The school then knows to observe the student and have trauma-informed interventions ready if needed. CISA Releases Anonymous Threat Response Guidance and Toolkit for K-12 Schools

The toolkit emphasizes six key strategies for schools to consider when addressing anonymous threats:

- Build awareness about reporting to detect threats early and deter future threats.
- Develop a partnership structure that will help address threats. This includes school administrators, law enforcement personnel and mental health professionals.
- Engage law enforcement to manage threat situations and decide when to scale response actions up or down.
- Balance initial response steps to ensure the campus is safe. Most critically, treat each threat as credible, and from there, work with necessary partners to determine how to approach an immediate response.
- When appropriate, tap into multidisciplinary threat assessment teams to support interventions and expedite response if the subject who made the threat becomes known.
- Take steps throughout the school year to prepare for threats. Establish a response protocol and practice other types of emergency management activities, such as training exercises for staff.

Promoting Mental Health and Well-Being in Schools: An Action Guide for School and District Leaders

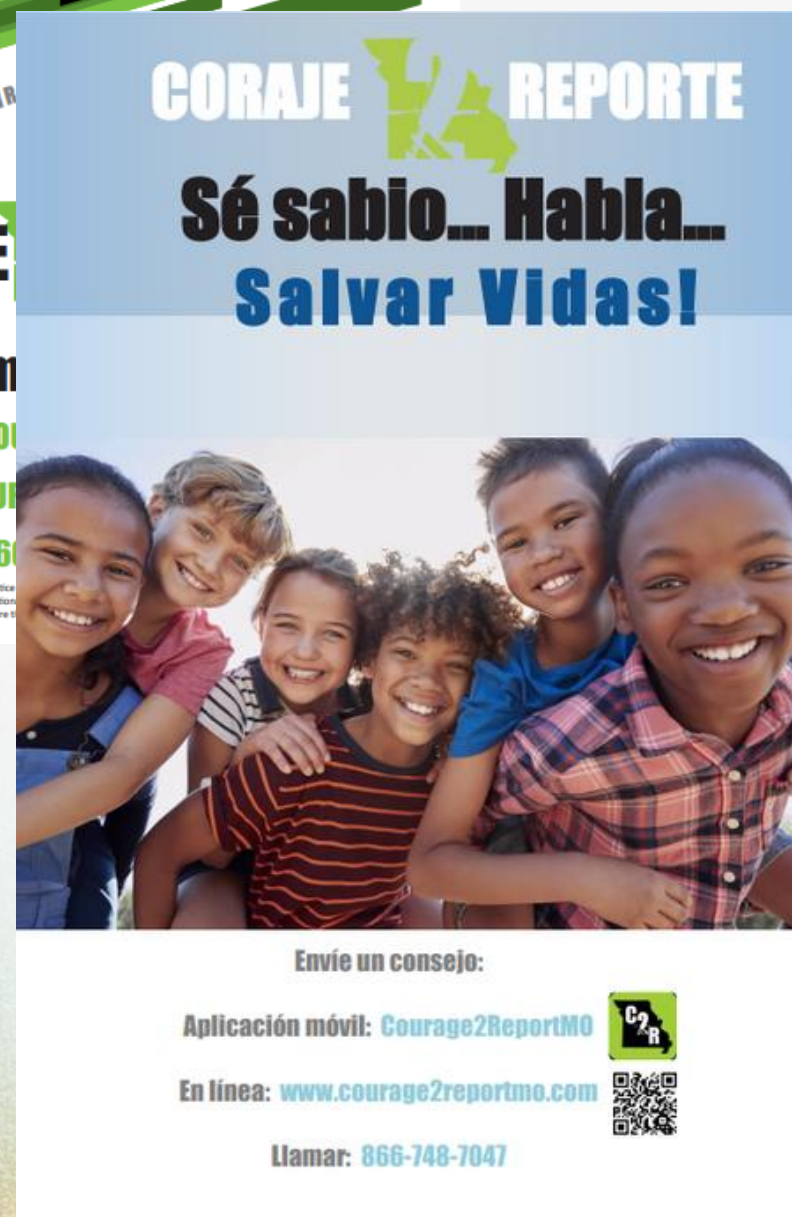

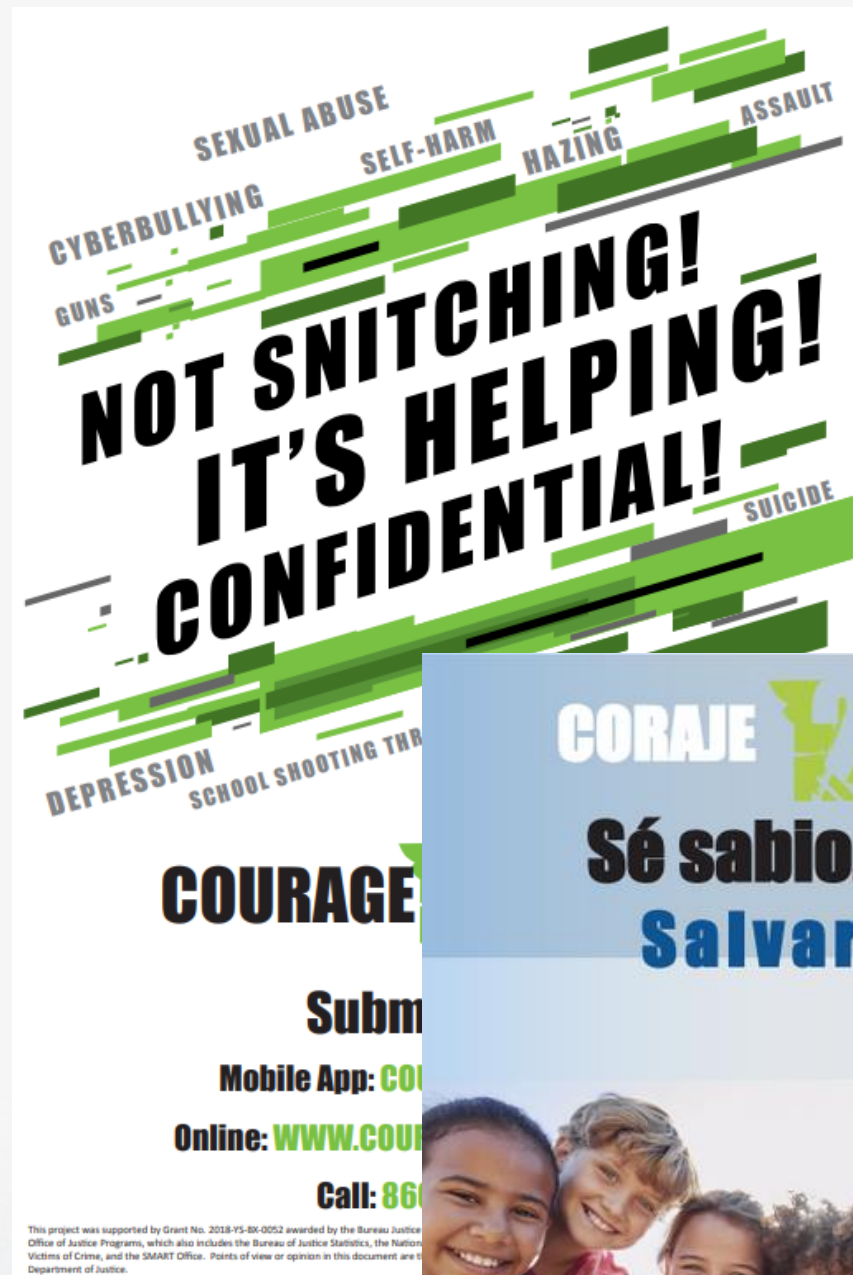

December 2023

Division of Adolescent and School Health (DASH)
National Center for Chronic Disease Prevention and Health Promotion (NCCDPHP)
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

Schools are prioritizing students' mental health, and there are many tools and resources to choose from. CDC created this action guide as a place to start. It can help school and district leaders build on what they are already doing to promote students' mental health and find new strategies to fill in gaps.

The action guide describes six in-school strategies that are proven to promote and support mental health and well-being. For each strategy, the guide also describes approaches, or specific ways to put the strategy into action, and examples of evidence-based policies, programs, and practices.
